

Be informed, be savvy and follow the smart path

There are lots of things to consider when paying for your college education. Loans may be a part of that mix, but there are many other things to consider:

Review your lifestyle. Trim costs. Consider needs vs. wants.

Think about all the technology that you like to use. A cellphone is a need for personal safety, but a loaded smartphone is almost assuredly a want. If you have a laptop, do you really need a tablet, too? Write down your needs and wants and review the list regularly.

Consider part-time employment to stretch your dollars without borrowing

Jobs with tips will put more cash in your pocket, restaurant jobs that provide free employee meals can reduce food expenses and some employers offer benefits such as health insurance or paid vacation. Jobs offer more than money: you get experience, develop a work ethic, and build relationships for the future.

Stretch your dollars: Check out the U-M Payment Plan for Fall-Winter semesters

Spread your bill over five payments for each semester as an alternative to the usual payment schedule. Students and authorized parents or family members may enroll through Wolverine Access each term.

Use personal or family assets when possible before considering a loan

If you have nothing extra to put toward college, consider creating a budget. CashCourse (budget.cashcourse.org) offers a Budget Wizard to help you get started.

Considering summer school? Take classes closer to home and incur less cost

Or ... get one or more roommates. Get recommendations and be clear about how you like to live. Are you clean or messy? Off-campus housing costs add up quickly. Take everything into account: rent, security deposit, credit report, utilities, food, transportation, insurance, furniture and even pets.
